IMPRESSIVE ARE SERVICES FOR EMPRESS

TOKIO, May 25.—A million torches and lanterns illuminated Tokio last night when the body of the Empress Dowager Haruko was borne through the streets in a beautiful funeral carriage by white oxen.
The ceremonies were the culmination of a series of services held daily since the official death of the empress dowager on April 11. Her actual death occurred two days earlier at Numadzu, but tradition prescribes that no member of the imperial family can die outside the capital, so the body of the empress was conveyed to Tokio and driven smartly to the Oayama palace in a closed private carriage. At the palace she "officially" died a few hours later.

In the six weeks since then a special temple was erected on the Yoyogi where the main funeral services were held. In the morning the services of "installation of her spirit" were performed, the empress princes and princesses of the blood being present to pray before the shrine.

At dusk, when the illumination of the route had been completed, the imperial coffin was placed in the funeral car at Oayama palace, and the procession formed with a large military force at its head. Amid dull yellow and white banners and torches came the funeral commissioners, accompanied by their secretaries, and court servants dressed in ancient robes. Interspersed were men bearing evergreen trees.
The funeral flutes were heard as the funeral car itself approached. It was led by Baron Hatano, minister of the imperial household, a striking figure in white, whose way was emblazoned by torches.
